Please do not rule that the Federal No Call List laws should override the Wisconsin No Call List rules. I have found peace in my home because the phone is not ringing during the dinner and evening hours, which is the only time that I have to spend with my family during the week. I do not want to have to begin screening my calls again, or listening to incessant ringing from vendors whom I have never bought from and will never buy from in the future.

This decision should be left to the states. If a state has decided, by the vote of its legislature, to have stricter rules, the only people who should be able to take away this law are the people of the state through elections and new legislation.

Please do not take away the right of our state to act on behalf of the public. We don't want telemarketing anymore...isn't it obvious?

Thank you.
